

Sunday Brunch & The Easter Egg Hunt

Sinopse Contextual:

É Domingo de Páscoa na casa de Grazi e Tom em Brasília! Tom está na cozinha às 9h da manhã preparando sua famosa receita secreta de brownies de chocolate americanos, enquanto Grazi prepara pratos especiais como falso lombo, purê de batatas, salada verde e frango assado. Na véspera, eles compraram ovos de chocolate e ovos de galinha para as meninas pintarem. Agora os ovos estão escondidos nos arbustos do quintal para a grande caça aos ovos antes do brunch ao ar livre!

The Sunday Brunch Story:

It's Sunday. Tom is in the kitchen right now. He's helping Grazi make a special Sunday brunch. It's 9 AM.

Grazi is making some special dishes for the brunch. She's making meatloaf, mashed potatoes, green salad, and roast chicken.

Tom is making his special recipe of a typical American chocolate brownie. Yes! Tom has a secret recipe!

They started preparing brunch on the day before — Saturday. Yesterday they bought some chocolate eggs and some chicken eggs.

Yesterday the girls painted the chicken eggs. Tom and Grazi went to the backyard to hide all the eggs in the bushes.

Right now the girls are setting up the table for the special brunch. Today they are eating outside in the back porch.

Anna and Flavia yell: "Table is ready!"

Tom says: "All right! Let the Egg Hunt begin!"

The girls run to the backyard and start looking for the easter eggs.

That's right, my friend, today is Easter Sunday! Happy Easter to you and your family!

■ A SACADA DE OURO DO PROFESSOR LEO LEITE:

"Em datas comemorativas e reuniões familiares (como Easter Sunday, Thanksgiving ou Natal), o inglês é falado em blocos rítmicos de colaboração na cozinha e no quintal ('helping-Grazi', 'setting-up-the-table', 'let-it-begin'). Não tente traduzir isoladamente cada ingrediente ou verbo no passado; sinta o filme da cena acontecendo enquanto fala. Repita as conexões no Player até a sua boca disparar o som sem hesitação!"
